Senior IT experts to gather at Cyber Security for Financial Services Exchange Asia 2017 in Indonesia

CIOs, CISOs and Heads of Cyber Security will gather at the upcoming Cyber Security for Financial Services Exchange Asia 2017 in Bali, Indonesia on 14 -16 May 2017 to discuss the global cyber threat landscape, strengthening resilience against cyber attacks and many more.

Chaired by Cisco's Senior Vice President, Chief Security and Trust Officer, John N. Stewart, the Exchange will feature leading cyber security experts from Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand and Philippines – to name a few. In Cisco's 2016 annual security report, John N. Stewart commented, "Attackers are becoming more bold and coordinated – they're sharing information and moving and innovating rapidly and then remaining incredibly flexible and resilient." He further added, "The ability to recognise and respond to security threats has become a business imperative".

Unlike traditional conferences or tradeshows, the primary focus and benefit of the Exchange is for new relationships to be forged and existing partnerships to be enhanced. It will also offer cyber security executives the opportunity to hear and discuss successful strategies in a true peer-to-peer networking forum. 45 CISOs, CIOs and Heads of Cyber Security from the Asia region will gather to address latest cyber threats issues, challenges and gain insights into the latest cyber law regulations in Asia. The line-up includes: keynotes, panel and round table discussions, think tanks, masterclasses and pre-scheduled 30 minute meetings with industry leaders.

Following last year's success, Cyber Security Exchange Asia is making a comeback this year, with emphasis on Financial Services. Slated as the go-to event for cyber security solutions, some major topics to be covered include: effectively managing risks and driving innovation in the fight against cyber crime, are your people the weakest link and more.
